

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

Endoscopic Retrograde Cholangiopancreatography (ERCP) Course

Course Overview

ERCP can be a technically challenging diagnostic and therapeutic procedure. Many nurses are not regularly involved with ERCP procedures, which can make gaining and maintaining proficiency challenging. It is important for nurses to have a good knowledge and understanding of the procedure and how the instruments are used. This course will focus on the relevant pancreaticobiliary anatomy and physiology, indications for ERCP, devices used for the procedure, the nurse's role and the teamwork necessary for successful performance of ERCP.

Learning Objectives

- Identify the role of nurses and associates involved with ERCP procedures
- Review the gastrointestinal anatomy and physiology related to ERCP
- Demonstrate optimal room set-up for ERCP procedures
- Hands-on demonstration of the proper use of ERCP accessories used for cannulation, sphincterotomy, wire exchanges, stone extraction with basket and balloon, mechanical lithotripsy and balloon dilation

Certification

Nurses may claim up to four hours of Continuing Professional Development (CPD) for this activity.
